FinCEN Alert on Nationwide Surge in Mail Theft-Related Check Fraud Schemes Targeting the U.S. Mail

Suspicious Activity Report (SAR) Filing Request:

FinCEN requests that financial institutions reference this alert in SAR field 2 (Filing Institution Note to FinCEN) and the narrative by including the key term “FIN-2023-MAILTHEFT” and marking the check box for check fraud (SAR Field 34(d)).

In light of a nationwide surge in check fraud schemes targeting the U.S. Mail¹ (hereinafter “mail theft-related check fraud”), the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN) is issuing this alert to financial institutions² to be vigilant in identifying and reporting such activity. Mail theft-related check fraud generally pertains to the fraudulent negotiation of checks stolen from the U.S. Mail. Fraud, including check fraud, is the largest source of illicit proceeds in the United States and represents one of the most significant money laundering threats to the United States, as highlighted in the U.S. Department of the Treasury’s most recent National Money Laundering Risk Assessment and

National Strategy for Combatting Terrorist and other Illicit Financing.³ Fraud is also one of the anti-money laundering/countering the financing of terrorism (AML/CFT) National Priorities.⁴

FinCEN is issuing this alert in close collaboration with the United States Postal Inspection Service (USPIS)⁵ to ensure that SARs filed by financial institutions appropriately identify and report suspected check fraud schemes that may be linked to mail theft in the United States. This alert provides an overview of a recent surge in mail theft-related check fraud, highlights select red flags to assist financial institutions in identifying and reporting suspicious activity, and reminds financial institutions of their reporting requirements under the Bank Secrecy Act (BSA).

The information contained in this alert is derived from FinCEN’s analysis of BSA data, open-source reporting, and information provided by law enforcement partners.

1. “U.S. Mail” is a registered trademark of the United States Postal Service (USPS) and includes all mail distributed and delivered through and by the Postal Service. This includes First-Class Mail such as mailed letters, cards, or other correspondence, which may contain checks, money orders, personal identifiable information, and credit cards/debit cards.

5. The USPIS is the law enforcement, crime prevention, and security arm of the USPS. Postal Inspectors are federal law enforcement agents who have broad authority to investigate violations of federal law that have a nexus to the U.S. Mail and USPS, including mail theft and associated financial crimes. USPIS is one of several federal agencies with authority to investigate the laundering of illicit proceeds. For more information, visit United States Postal Inspection Service \(uspis.gov\). Emerging Trends in Mail Theft-Related Check Fraud Schemes

Despite the declining use of checks in the United States,⁶ criminals have been increasingly targeting the U.S. Mail since the COVID-19 pandemic to commit check fraud.⁷ The United States Postal Service (USPS) delivers nearly 130 billion pieces of U.S. Mail every year to over 160 million residential and business addresses across the United States.⁸ From March 2020 through February 2021, the USPIS received 299,020 mail theft complaints, which was an increase of 161 percent compared with the same period a year earlier.⁹ BSA reporting for check fraud has also increased in the past three years. In 2021, financial institutions filed more than 350,000 SARs to FinCEN to report potential check fraud, a 23 percent increase over the number of check fraud-related SARs filed in 2020. This upward trend continued into 2022, when the number of SARs related to check fraud reached over 680,000, nearly double the previous year's amount of filings.¹⁰

Mail Theft Risks and Vulnerabilities

Criminals committing mail theft-related check fraud generally target the U.S. Mail in order to steal personal checks, business checks, tax refund checks, and checks related to government assistance programs, such as Social Security payments and unemployment benefits. Criminals will generally steal all types of checks in the U.S. Mail as part of a mail theft scheme, but business checks may be more valuable because business accounts are often well-funded and it may take longer for the victim to notice the fraud. There have been cases of Postal Service employees stealing checks at USPS sorting and distribution facilities.¹¹ However, according to USPIS, mail theft-related check fraud is increasingly committed by non-USPS employees, ranging from individual fraudsters to organized criminal groups comprised of the organizers of the criminal scheme, recruiters, check washers, and money mules.

Check Washers: Check washing involves the use of chemicals to remove the original ink on a check to replace the payee and often the dollar amount. Fraudsters may also copy and print multiple washed checks for future use or to sell to third-party criminals.¹²

Money Mules: A money mule is a person (whether witting or unwitting) who transfers or moves illicit funds at the direction of or on behalf of another.¹³

These criminals, located throughout the country, target USPS blue collection boxes, unsecured residential mailboxes, and privately owned cluster box units at apartment complexes, planned neighborhoods, and high-density commercial buildings. Mail theft can occur through forced entry or the use of makeshift fishing devices,¹⁴ and increasingly involves the use of authentic or counterfeit USPS master keys, known as Arrow Keys. Arrow Keys open USPS blue collection boxes and cluster box units within a geographic area, and a number of recent cases involve organized criminals violently targeting USPS mail carriers with the intent of stealing Arrow Keys.¹⁵ There have also been cases of corrupt Postal Service employees who unlawfully provide Arrow Keys to criminal actors to facilitate mail theft.¹⁶ Illicit actors may also copy and sell stolen Arrow Keys to third-party fraudsters on the dark web and through encrypted social media platforms in exchange for convertible virtual currency.

Typologies of Mail Theft-Related Check Fraud and Associated Money Laundering

After stealing checks from the U.S. Mail, fraudsters and organized criminal groups may alter or “wash” the checks, replacing the payee information with their own or fraudulent identities or with business accounts that the criminals control. During check washing, these illicit actors also often increase the dollar amount on the check, sometimes by hundreds or thousands of dollars. Washed checks may also be copied, printed, and sold to third-party fraudsters on the dark web and encrypted social media platforms in exchange for convertible virtual currency. In some cases, victim checks are also counterfeited using routing and account information from the original, stolen check.¹⁷ Illicit actors may cash or deposit checks in person at financial institutions, through automated teller machines (ATMs), or via remote deposit into accounts they control, and which they often open specifically for the check fraud schemes. Criminals may also rely on money mules and their pre-existing accounts to deposit fraudulent checks.¹⁸ Regardless, once the checks are deposited, the illicit actors often rapidly withdraw the funds through ATMs or wire them to other accounts that they control to further obfuscate their ill-gotten gains. The criminals may further exploit the victims by using personal identifiable information found in the stolen mail for future fraud schemes such as credit card fraud or credit account fraud.¹⁹

Financial Red Flags Relating to Mail Theft-Related Check Fraud

FinCEN, in coordination with USPS, has identified red flags to help financial institutions detect, prevent, and report suspicious activity connected to mail theft-related check fraud, many of which overlap with red flags for check fraud in general. As no single red flag is determinative of illicit or suspicious activity, financial institutions should consider the surrounding facts and circumstances, such as a customer’s historical financial activity, whether the transactions are in line with prevailing business practices, and whether the customer exhibits multiple red flags, before determining if a behavior or transaction is suspicious or otherwise indicative of mail theft-related check fraud. In line with their risk-based approach to compliance with the BSA, financial institutions are also encouraged to perform additional due diligence where appropriate.

-  1 Non-characteristic large withdrawals on a customer’s account via check to a new payee.
-  2 Customer complains of a check or checks stolen from the mail and then deposited into an unknown account.
-  3 Customer complains that a check they mailed was never received by the intended recipient.
-  4 Checks used to withdraw funds from a customer’s account appear to be of a noticeably different check stock than check stock used by the issuing bank and check stock used for known, legitimate transactions.
-  5 Existing customer with no history of check deposits has new sudden check deposits and withdrawal or transfer of funds.
-  6 Non-characteristic, sudden, abnormal deposit of checks, often electronically, followed by rapid withdrawal or transfer of funds.

17. See USPS, Scam Article, Check Fraud (May 1, 2019).

18. In the case of mail theft-related check fraud, money mules are generally younger in age and are witting accomplices in the scheme. In certain cases, criminal organizations prey upon homeless individuals and addicts by soliciting them as money mules and giving them a small portion of the cashed checks.

19. See generally DOJ, Press Release, “Repeat Offender on Supervised Release Admits to Stealing Mail and Pleads Guilty to Wire Fraud” (June 7, 2022).

- 7 Examination of suspect checks reveals faded handwriting underneath darker handwriting, giving the appearance that the original handwriting has been overwritten.
- 8 Suspect accounts may have indicators of other suspicious activity, such as pandemic-related fraud.²⁰
- 9 New customer opens an account that is seemingly used only for the deposit of checks followed by frequent withdrawals and transfer of funds.
- 10 A non-customer that is attempting to cash a large check or multiple large checks in-person and, when questioned by the financial institution, provides an explanation that is suspicious or potentially indicative of money mule activity.

Mail Theft-Related Check Fraud Reporting Hotline for Victims

In addition to filing a SAR, as applicable, financial institutions should refer their customers who may be victims of mail theft-related check fraud to the USPIS at 1-877-876-2455 or <https://www.uspis.gov/report> to report the incident.

USPIS Tips to Prevent Mail Theft

FinCEN recommends as a best practice that financial institutions refer their customers to www.uspis.gov/tips-prevention/mail-theft for tips from the USPIS on how to protect against mail theft.

If customers appear to be a victim of a theft involving USPS money orders, refer them to <https://www.usps.com/shop/money-orders.htm> for guidance on how to replace a lost or stolen money order.

Reminder of Relevant BSA Obligations and Tools for U.S. Financial Institutions

*Suspicious Activity Reporting
Other Relevant BSA Reporting*

USA PATRIOT ACT Section 314(b) Information Sharing Authority

Suspicious Activity Reporting

A financial institution is required to file a SAR if it knows, suspects, or has reason to suspect a transaction conducted or attempted by, at, or through the financial institution involves funds derived from illegal activity; is intended or conducted to disguise funds derived from illegal activity; is designed to evade regulations promulgated under the BSA; lacks a business or apparent lawful purpose; or involves the use of the financial institution to facilitate criminal activity.²¹ All statutorily defined financial institutions may voluntarily report suspicious transactions under the existing suspicious activity reporting safe harbor.²²

When a financial institution files a SAR, it is required to maintain a copy of the SAR and the original or business record equivalent of any supporting documentation for a period of five years from the date of filing the SAR.²³ Financial institutions must provide any requested documentation supporting the filing of a SAR upon request by FinCEN or an appropriate law enforcement or supervisory agency.²⁴ When requested to provide supporting documentation, financial institutions should take special care to verify that a requestor of information is, in fact, a representative of FinCEN or an appropriate law enforcement or supervisory agency. A financial institution should incorporate procedures for such verification into its BSA compliance or AML program. These procedures may include, for example, independent employment verification with the requestor's field office or face-to-face review of the requestor's credentials.

SAR Filing Instructions

FinCEN requests that financial institutions indicate a connection between the suspicious activity being reported and the activities highlighted in this alert by including the key term "FIN-2023-MAILTHEFT" in SAR field 2 ("Filing Institution Note to FinCEN"), as well as in the narrative, and by selecting SAR Field 34(d) (check fraud). Financial institutions may highlight additional advisory or alert keywords in the narrative, if applicable.

Financial institutions and other entities or persons also may have other relevant BSA reporting requirements to provide information in connection with the subject of this alert. These include obligations related to the Currency Transaction Report (CTR),²⁷ Report of Cash Payments Over $10,000 Received in a Trade or Business (Form 8300),²⁸ Report of Foreign Bank and Financial Accounts (FBAR),²⁹ Report of International Transportation of Currency or Monetary Instruments (CMIR),³⁰ Registration of Money Services Business (RMSB),³¹ and Designation of Exempt Person (DOEP).³² These standard reporting requirements may not have an obvious connection to illicit finance, but may ultimately prove highly useful to law enforcement.

Information Sharing

Information sharing among financial institutions is critical to identifying, reporting, and preventing mail theft-related check fraud or other illicit financial activity. Financial institutions and associations of financial institutions sharing information under the safe harbor authorized by section 314(b) of the USA PATRIOT Act are reminded that they may share information with one another regarding individuals, entities, organizations, and countries suspected of possible terrorist financing or money laundering.³³ FinCEN strongly encourages such voluntary information sharing.
